

Enthusiastic Reception For R. B. Bennett

Leader of Conservative Party Addresses Club

DEFINES IDEALS

C. H. Cahan, Hon. Andre Fauteux and Mayor Houde Also Speak

Hon. R. B. Bennett, Leader of the Conservative party in Canada, defined the threefold ideal and program of the party in address delivered before a gathering of well over fifteen hundred at the dinner given in his honour by the Liberal Conservative Club of Montreal at the Mount Royal Hotel last night. "We must," he said, "safeguard the industries of the country; we must provide in every possible way for the safeguarding and full development of our natural resources; and we must, by means of the above measures, protect the people themselves, on whom the country is absolutely dependent for its existence."

Mr. Bennett, after defining the ideal of the Conservative party, proceeded to elaborate these ideals, quoting statistics showing the trend in recent years of import and export trade, and of emigration. "What," he asked, looking at a table next to the platform, which was graced by the presence of a dozen McGill students, "will the youth of this country think when they examine these figures and see their country buying $35,000,000 worth of goods annually—goods that are part of the needs of every person, and must be either produced at home or bought from abroad? What will they think when they see the magnetism of our neighbours from the south, to quote Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, drawing these hordes of Canadians across the border each year?" He pointed out that Ramsay MacDonald had stated on the conclusion of his recent tour that the only way in which this country can keep their young men and women at home is by matching this magnetism of the United States with attractions which will keep them at home.

The greatest enthusiasm was shown at the gathering, which occupied the whole of the hall and piazza of the Mount Royal Hotel. Wild cheers greeted Mr. Bennett and the other speakers of the evening, including C. H. Cahan, Hon. Andre Fauteux, and finally, Mayor Houde.

Union House Bye-Elections

Jopling, Boak, And Martin Returned As Representatives

Thomas R. Jopling and Andrew C. Boak of the Faculty of Science and Tim Martin Arts '30 were yesterday elected as representatives to the Union House Committee. One hundred and seventy-one Science students voted and the race for election was close.

DR. NICHOLSON NOW IN QUEBEC

Dr. Nicholson, the Registrar, left last night for Quebec City to attend a meeting of the Protestant Committee of the Council of Education commencing at ten this morning.

Fair Coed Becomes Cynic After Sad Disillusionment Finds Sex Appeal Essential

On the eve of Wednesday, October 28 one of our fair Physical Eds put into practice her knowledge of psychology; the study of Human Behaviour.

Having washed her face with palm-olive soap, parted her hair severely in the middle, donning tortoise-shelled goggles and defying Dame Fashion in a clean white middle, neat red tie, navy blue skirt, and sensible wooden stockings, she proceeded to the Conservatory as Annie Smith of Lachine.

Leaving the dressing room Little Annie's heart fluttered wildly. Men rushed about right by her. Holding out her card, she waited. Would the men of Old McGill seek only for Beauty? Would they not quest for mental and spiritual equality? Half an hour sped up. I inquired anxiously, "Have you anything on your pro-

To Lecture Upon Use Of Library Filing System

Anyone who frequents the library cannot but be aware from time to time of an appalling waste. A waste of both time and energy. Most of this is occasioned by the fact that many of the students using the library have little or no idea how correctly to use the files. In consequence thereof they first spend minutes on end in an abortive search for filing data of this or that book they have been instructed to read. Finally they approach the librarian and take up some of her time while she tells them where they may find that for which they search. All this when little time devoted toward an intelligent study of the way in which libraries are run would clear up the whole problem.

This is to be made possible, and in the following manner. A series of four lectures the subject matter of which will solve this problem are on schedule. These lectures are sponsored by the Library School. They are to be held on Tuesdays at five o'clock in Room 20 of the Arts Building. It is requested that all students who have had or expect to have difficulty in using the files to find books in the library, attend these lectures.

Cars Park In Varsity Quad?

Debating Society to Consider Vital Question

MOCK PARLIAMENT

Larke Turn-out Urged For First Meeting R.V.C. May Attend

The debating season will officially open next Thursday evening, November first, when the McGill Debating Union Society will stage one of their renowned Mock Parliaments. The Government under the leadership of the Rt. Hon. A. Gordon Nairn, B.A. (McGill), Law '30, will test the strength of their party in the House when a Minister will introduce a Bill which is calculated to arouse a storm of emotion and sentiment throughout the length and breadth of the University. "Resolved that Automobiles should be allowed to park within the Campus grounds," is an audacious and breath-taking Bill for even a party with the numerical strength of the present Government to undertake. The Hon. A. M. Klein Arts '30 will lead the Opposition horde in a valiant attempt to obtain the defeat of the Government on this portentous issue. Discourse of a Third Party, usually unwelcome in politics as in love, are again rising to the force, and Thursday night may see both Government and His Majesty's Official outnumbered, outspoken, and outvoted by a party possessing a mandate from the Common People (sic).

The General Elections having taken place during the summer months, and members from all parts of the country from Vancouver West to Lachine South are expected to throng the precincts of the Union Ballroom next Thursday at 8.15 p.m. to vent their righteous spleen on whomsoever they conceive to be their political opponents. The Hon. Mr. Knatchbull Huggessen, quondam Speaker of the House will be present with force to ensure order.

Motherwell Talks About Comets' Tails

Very Few Extent Comets Seen

COMET 1914—WAR

Belief of Ancients Seemingly Corroborated—Modern Less Credulous Of Omens

"Hundreds of cubic miles of a comet's tail contain less matter than one cubic inch of atmosphere on the earth's surface," claimed Mr. R. M. Motherwell in his address to an open meeting of the Montreal Centre of the Royal Astronomical Society at the MacDonald Physics Building last night. Mr. Motherwell was for many years a member of the staff of the Dominion Observatory at Ottawa.

To date there have been nine hundred comets recorded, five hundred of which have been discovered since the invention of the telescope about 1600. One hundred of these are known to have an elliptical orbit and consequently will return in the future if they have not done so already. Due to the effect of heavenly bodies upon these comets, some of them are known to change their course and fly into space becoming lost. Another variation in the orbit of a comet is caused by the attraction of Jupiter. Brooks comet passed at one time, within 50,000 miles of Jupiter and its period of revolution was changed from nine years to seven years, being thrown back by the influence of this planet.

Very few of the comets in existence are seen, ideal conditions being necessary to find them. When comets approach too close to the sun they become exceedingly indistinct and even utterly invisible. In proof of this Mr. Motherwell stated that comets are sometimes photographed near the sun during an eclipse but are lost afterwards.

Photography has aided the study of comets to a great extent as one may be found, sometimes, in a negative, that had never been suspected. When comets are noticed they are first recorded and then observations are taken to determine the orbit, as this is the only way a comet may be identified. If it has been recorded before, a comet cannot possibly be identified by its shape, as it is often thought, because they are continually changing.

Juvenile Book Shops Needed

Mrs. Carter Addresses Household Show

The importance of encouraging children to exercise their own choice of books, and the necessity of directing their choice wisely, through presenting to them "books that are products of rich, full minds," were points emphasized by Mrs. Mary Duncan Carter, assistant director of the McGill Library School, addressing the Montreal Household Show in the Windsor Hotel Tuesday afternoon. "Montreal," she remarked, "still lacks a library containing books specially adapted for the rising generation, although Westmount has a children's reading room and provision for story-telling hours."

Newer Canadian books, expressing national spirit, as well as standard works that have entertained generations of children, are valuable components of a children's library. Mrs. Carter illustrated the different types of books suitable to various ages, and pointed out that it was the duty of all interested in the future of the Dominion to supervise personally the choice of their children's reading.

Books suitable for children of all ages are displayed in the Library School Exhibition stand in the Rose Room of the Windsor Hotel. Mrs. Carter and a number of graduates from the School are in charge of the exhibit.

WRESTLERS

A special practice will be held on Friday evening at 7.30 p.m. in Strathcona Hall.

Red and White Revue

All those who wish to take an active part in the managing and production of the Revue are requested to send their names in to Mr. G. H. Fletcher, McGill Union, before Monday noon.

Upperclass Men Give Welcome To Freshettes

The McGill Women Students' Society held a reception at the Royal Victoria College yesterday afternoon for the Freshettes and other women students of the University. Miss Adele Langueco, the president of the M.W.S.S., welcomed the students and gave a brief talk on the Society, mentioning the different auxiliary societies and their activities.

Mrs. Vaughan, acting warden of the R.V.C., then spoke to the students. In her talk Mrs. Vaughan, quoting from a book she had just read, gave the four essential things a student should possess, vitality, courage, sensibleness and intellectuality. Mrs. Vaughan regretted the absence of Miss Hurlbatt.

Tea was next served, after which the Freshettes were entertained by the M.S.P.E. girls, who put on two skits, one of which was a short Revue, while the other was an original three act play. Miss Crabtree then gave a humorous "Monologue" which was followed by a short piece about "Man's Deception Throughout His Seven Stages."

Scarlet Key Society Meets

Cabaret To Take Place Of Tea-Dance

AFTER VARSITY GAME

Special Committee Appointed Will Get Under Way Immediately

At a special informal meeting of the Scarlet Key Society held last evening it was decided to have a Cabaret after the McGill-Varsity game here on November 10th. Fourteen were present beside the President and Secretary.

The meeting was called to order at 5.15 by William Walker, Chairman. Stuart Webster reported on the enquiries he made as to those Fraternities having tea-dances on that afternoon. All but one stated they would postpone their dances, should the Scarlet Key hold one.

Their was a discussion as to the advisability of a Cabaret. It was said, in favour, that many students would be unable to go directly to a tea-dance from the game, also the players would be tired and not wish to get dressed in a hurry and then go to a tea-dance. Whereas if a Cabaret was held they would have time to get rested and be more refreshed. On the other hand, it was pointed out that if McGill won the game many students would parade around the city, and not be in the humour to take young ladies to a Cabaret. If we lost the game students would be too discouraged to attend such a function. A vote was taken in favour of having a Cabaret.

It was then proposed to have a committee of four to look into the (Continued on page three.)

Change Of Venue

Lloyd's "Wonderland Through a Microscope" Well Received

There has been such an enthusiastic response on the part of the public to Professor Lloyd's first lectures in his series on "Wonderland through a Microscope" that Colonel Bovey has announced that he has arranged for the rest of the lectures to be held in the Montreal High School Hall. The original plan was to have the meetings in the Biological Building, but as the room seats only two hundred and fifty, a larger hall has to be found. Through the kindness of Dr. Gammell, rector of the High School, the larger hall is to be used in the future.

PROF. DERRICK ILL.

Prof. Carrie M. Derrick, who has been associated with the department of botany in the Biological Building for many years and who is lecturer in comparative morphology and genetics, has been absent from the university since the opening of the present session through sickness.

Prof. P. E. Lloyd, MacDonald professor of botany and director of the Biological Building, is at present taking Professor Derrick's lectures. Doctors in attendance to Professor Derrick state that she will likely be unable to take her lectures during the first half of the present session. She hopes to be able to return to the university some time after the Christmas holidays.

First Meeting Of Political Economy Club

Gruchy and Bergithon Present Papers

ON COMMUNISM

Theory Forwarded For Upheaval in Russia

The Russian Revolution was more likely to have been caused by the old administration and not by the communists, according to A. G. Gruchy, B.A., who delivered one of two papers with the subject, "The Advance of Russian Communism," at the first meeting of the Political Economy Club held last evening for the season 1928-29. Carl Bergithon also discussed this topic.

"The Revolution was not inevitable," explained A. G. Gruchy. If there had been no war in 1914, most likely there would have been no revolution. Previous to the war, an attempt was made to improve conditions in the country. Private ownership took the place of the strip system as far as possible, and by 1914, three-quarters of the land was controlled by the peasants.

The value of communism as an economic system was not lowered because of Bolshevism. There was a period between 1917 and 1919 when the Bolshevik party was surrounded by intervening forces. This was followed by a period when the government was supreme in production and distribution. The true system of communism does not admit of government supremacy, so in one aspect, bolshevism was not pure communism.

The systems of communism followed by the Russian leaders were those of Dictatorship and Terrorism as put forth by Russian economists and the economics and social philosophy of the German, Karl Marx. Lenin followed Marx' theories very closely. Terrorism seemed a necessary part of the revolution.

"The period of production is now over, and the period of distribution is now on," stated A. G. Gruchy.

Carl Bergithon, in presenting the second paper, Carl Bergithon compared the old regime of Russia with the new system now being followed.

Before the revolution, the Tsar was an autocratic ruler, looked upon as the father of all Russians; the com-

McGill C.O.T.C. Manoeuvres

To Make Trip To Ste. Marguerite's Over Week-End

Tomorrow morning some seventy-five members of the McGill Contingent Canadian Officers Training Corps are setting out for week-end manoeuvres at Ste. Marguerite's P.Q. The advance party consisting mainly of the detachment from the Quarter-Masters Stores, will leave Place Viger Station at 9.00 A.M. Saturday. The train carrying the main party pulls out of the same station at 12.50 P.M. Saturday. The whole Corps will return on a train reaching Montreal at 9.00 P.M. Sunday.

This year's trip is expected to prove very successful. There are several reasons on which this hope is based. The number of cadets going on the expedition, seventy-five to be exact is by far the largest which has participated in such a trip since the War. Ste. Marguerite's is remembered with great pleasure by old members of the Corps, and these have been pouring tales of joys past and to come into the eager ears of the recruits. The scenery in the district is delightfully rugged and from the top of Mount Ste.

Union Hop Tonight Starts At 8.30

Student attention is called to the fact that the Union Informal tonight is to get under way at eight-thirty o'clock sharp. The final strains of the National Anthem are scheduled for one-thirty. Hence the necessity of an early start.

There are still a few tickets left unsold. These may be purchased at the Tuck Shop for $1.25.

Izzie Aspler and his seven piece campus dance band are purveying the music. 'Nough said!

Vatican Uses Queen's Colours

Rome, October 25th. (Special Cable to McGill Daily).—"The Vatican looks like a Queen's field house," declared a McGill graduate who was almost overcome recently when on a visit to the residence of Pope Pius XI. He discovered all the guards dressed in the Protestant colours of Queen's University, with brilliant stripes of blue, yellow and maroon. Queen's University is situated in the city of Kingston, Province of Ontario, in the Dominion of Canada.

Arts Juniors Hold Banquet

Weather Forecast for Tomorrow Night: Cloudy, Heavy Showers High Winds

Of more than usual interest to Arts Juniors is the class banquet which is being held this evening at Krausman's Lorraine Cafe in Phillips Square. This banquet which has become an annual event in the year for the class of Arts '30 promises to be very interesting, occurring as it does on the eve of the annual football struggle with the Royal Military College.

As in former years this banquet will be very informal, it being the policy of the executive to encourage class spirit through actual inter-course at the festive table. To this end there will be no special speaker and all entertainment will come from the members of the class itself. Bob MacDonald when interviewed last night stated that there were still a few tickets available for the men of Arts '30 and that it was his hope that the class to a man would be on hand when the feast gets under way at 6.30 tonight.

It has been stated that there will be a host of new stories and speeches specially prepared for the occasion; and that there will not be one dry moment in the course of the whole evening's enjoyment. Preparations have been under way for the past few weeks and an excellent evening's amusement is anticipated for those who will avail themselves of this opportunity to meet their classmates in the congenial surroundings of the downtown cafe.

The executive also point out that those attending the banquet can make a preliminary to the Union House Informal which is being held tonight in the Union ballroom. "Therefore" say the class officers "Over the Top tonight at 6.30".

Choral Society to Produce H.M.S. Pinafore

Holds First Meeting

The Operatic and Choral Society held its initial practice last night at the Conservatorium. Due to the fact that there were many other engagements, the attendance was not as large as expected. However much good material was uncovered and the members entered into the spirit of the Opera with great enthusiasm. Mr. Clapperton, the director, played through the whole score and was very much pleased with the way the members caught on to the swing of the choruses. Great things are expected of the Society this year, and if they continue in the way they have started, the students of McGill and the Montreal Public again will be treated to a Gilbert and Sullivan Opera really well done.

PHYSICAL SOCIETY

The next meeting of the Society will be held in the Main Lecture Theatre of the MacDonald Physics Laboratory today, October 26th, at 5 o'clock. Dr. J. S. Foster will speak on "New Viewpoints on Atomic Physics." All interested are cordially invited to attend the lecture.

Players' Club Production Next Month

H. P. Bell Addresses Members in First Meeting

"THE WATCHED POT"

Former Red And White Review Director Speaks

"Audiences will forgive poor acting in a play if they are given scenic atmosphere of an artistic nature that will attract and hold their attention," declared H. P. Bell in his address at the first meeting of the Players' Club which was held last night in Strathcona Hall. Mr. Bell is the music critic of the Montreal Star.

In addition Mr. Chesney, casting director of the Club and Sidney Pierce spoke to the members. L. C. Shelly, President, announced that the first production of the Club this year would be "The Watched Pot" by H. H. Munro who writes under the pen-name of Sakl. It is a three act comedy and will be staged in the latter part of November.

Mr. Bell, who until recently was associated with the famous Hart House Theatre in Toronto, described the method of production used by the Toronto players under Mr. Mitchell. The Hart House theatre evolved from the University Players' Club which was a similar organization to the present club at McGill. The plays put on by Mr. Mitchell were mostly of the experimental kind, sometimes being very successful and at other times poor.

In the course of his address, Mr. Bell said that an amateur company is not to be judged by their acting but by whether they make an effort to produce scenic atmosphere of an artistic nature that will hold the attention of the audience. Though the moving action is the essential part of the drama, at the same time an actor is never forgiven unless the audience are able to hear what he says.

In conclusion Mr. Bell stated that the Players' Club should not try to put on plays that are produced by commercial companies. People attending these except too much from amateur performers.

Mr. Sidney Pierce in a few words explained that today the stage calls for sincerity. He commented on the large enrolment of the Club and said that this was a big factor in their success.

Assistants Met In Dental Faculty

Activities of Dent. Assistants' Association Outlined

The Montreal Dental Assistants' Association held their opening meeting at the McGill Dental Faculty early this week. Miss E. Moye, who presided, gave a brief outline of the activities of the society, and urged each member to do what they could to enlarge the membership of the society. She also expressed her appreciation of all those who helped to make the organization a success.

Miss R. Ratner, the founder and organizer of the society, was presented with a bouquet of flowers in grateful acknowledgement of her services. Miss Ratner thanked all present for their expression of appreciation, which she considered an encouragement to do even greater work in the future. She also assured the audience that it was the assistance that she received from the officers and members, that made it possible to achieve the success that the Society did.

Dean A. L. Walsh and Professor P. H. A. Baxter, both of the McGill Dental Faculty, delivered addresses exhorting the Montreal Dental Assistants' Association to continue the splendid work which was started two years ago. They assured those present that they would at all times be willing to be of assistance.

The meeting was well attended, and amongst the representative dentists present as guests of the society was Dr. Fields of Toronto.

PHYSICS' COLLOQUIUM

In the Physics Building at 5 p.m. yesterday afternoon, Mr. T. N. White M.Sc., conducted a very interesting colloquium before a large number of interested students. Through the use of both blackboard and slides Mr. White made a very able presentation of his subject "The X-Ray of Certain Substitution Products of Cyclohexane."

MONTREAL, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1928.

THINKING IT THROUGH

One of the younger professors at McGill, when speaking to a group of freshmen last week said: "If you would be true students you should have among your University Clubs not only the Student Christian Association, but the Student Buddhist and Students Confucianist Associations also." By this he meant, that if students want to learn the truth about religion and life they will have to dig into it for themselves, here and now, abandoning all preceptions.

Here is a most daring adventure, and we wonder how many people would be willing to try it. Most students begin to doubt much that they have previously accepted soon after entering college, but in their new ideas they rarely take the trouble to go beyond the stage of mere devastating doubt. The professor mentioned above implied that in the new outlook on life and our relations with other men with new views, students should go to the bed rock of life and test the validity of his philosophy, which now has either to go by the boards or be reconstructed.

We would like to congratulate the S.C.A. this year of its policy of groups meeting for the purpose of free discussion on different viewpoints. We understand that some groups have been formed consisting of both Jews and Christians to study the question of comparative religions. It is surely in frank meetings of this sort that understanding of sometimes opposed viewpoints can result. We would like to insist however, that it is the duty of every student at University to think out for himself the problems that he has become cognizant of through his opportunity of higher education. There is no attitude so easy as that of simple doubt, and nothing so helpful as constructive thought.

THE LITERARY COLUMN

Literary lights at this University have very little opportunity for expression now that the Fortnightly and kindred ventures have become mere interesting memories. With today's issue the Daily opens up a few of its columns a week to the worthy end of acting as some sort of safety valve for those who feel the need of expression along purely literary lines for the demand of this expression.

These columns will be open to contributors, and it is hoped that full advantage will be taken of the space that will be provided. As there is naturally only a limited amount of room available, some sort of selection will be necessary to keep within bounds. This will be however, based entirely on the merit of the contributions.

FOOL 'EM EVERY TIME

It has been long a known fact that women have the extraordinary power of "pulling the wool over the eyes of men." Usually it has been also the custom for un-attractive girls to so garnish themselves as to appear the fairest of damsels to such as fall to their lures. This time, however, it was otherwise. A fair and particularly attractive lass, a student in that department of the University most famed for its beauties, has done the opposite. She donned heavy bone-rimmed glasses, slicked-back her hair, subdued her voice, put on a middy and presented herself at the Conversat. Her make-up was not a bit over-done. Nevertheless it had the desired results from the point of view of the young experimenter in male mob psychology. Her program remained without a name.

This teaches us two lessons. First, that we males are still superficially discriminating for all our pretence to culture; Second, that women still can fool us for all our wisdom of the world.

THE PLAYERS' CLUB

The Players' Club has succeeded in bringing together three experts to address their members at the last meeting. H. P. Bell, dramatic critic on the Montreal "Star," is well-known to all of us. Mr. Chesney has been active in the Montreal Operatic Society, and was stage manager of "Tom Jones" produced two years ago by the McGill Operatic and Choral Society, and made many warm friends while engaged in the McGill production. "Sid" Pierce producer of the first Red and White Revue, needs no introduction to the undergraduates.

We think that the Players' Club could hardly have made a better choice of speakers. From the way this club is starting off, it is in for a successful year.

THE MUEZZIN

A Weekly Section of Literature and Literary Criticism.

Inaugural.

All our friends assure us that this is a very foolish undertaking. They say that the only reward will be much vulgar criticism from the hordes of philistia and the general indifference of the student body as a whole. Such they tell us has been the fate of similar literary projects in the past. Perhaps so. Still there are surely some who will appreciate and mayhap applaud our efforts to stimulate interests in things artistic and literary, and to create, if possible, a little beauty. That is our only object. To those who care nothing for such matters we can only offer our sincerest apologies for taking up so much valuable space, and pray the gods of Babbity to keep watch and ward over them.

Do not think for a moment that this page is restricted to any particular clique to the exclusion of all others as has often been the custom with similar enterprises in the past. Not at all. We shall be only too glad to receive contributions. If you write poetry, short literary essays, critical articles, epigrams, fables etc. send them in. Whether a poem be written in old style or new style, in old moods or new moods, if it be art, we shall accept it.

As the girls are being admitted to the reportorial staff of the Daily, and to the English Society this year there is all the more reason why they should be represented on this page. So, if within the august walls of the R.V.C. there be any "burning Sapphos" lurking we shall strew their paths with laurels. But think not to deceive us with womanish wiles. We shall refuse the outpourings of the female charlatan as gruffly as the male.

Our cynical friends again come to our assistance with the suggestion that we shall receive no contributions because there are none at McGill, outside of a chosen few, capable of writing presentable prose or poetry. Again, perhaps so. In that case we fear that the brunt of the task of filling this page will fall on our shoulders. This, much as it is to be rejoiced at from an artistic point of view, would, nevertheless, indicate a more or less deplorable state of affairs as far as literary interest in the college is concerned.

Manuscripts may be addressed to K. N. Cameron and left at the Daily Office or at the Tuck Shop.

Autumnal In Red, Yellow and Brown

Yellow leaves, and brown and red leaves
Fall listlessly like spent desires.
O yellow leaves, and brown and red leaves
Don't sting me with your subtle fires.

Do not hunt me any more,
I cannot lose you though I try.
Last night I saw you dance upon the floor,
(In a saraband upon the floor)
I know not why.
All night I saw you falling from the sky
Melancholy hosts
Recalling ancient ghosts
I thought I once had killed and yet must kill once more.

Yellow leaves and brown and red leaves
Falling, falling,
What is the stifled song you sing
In the East Wind's calling?
What is the plaintive message you bring
From what dead Spring?
What is the old, sad song you sing,
Red leaves, dead leaves falling...

K. N. CAMERON

Helen.

You are Helen, pensive on a shadowy tower,
And I, a little poet writing free verses
Dog-cared from rubbing in the mind's pockets
And thumbed with twisting from the mind's maze
A long time after.

And because you are Helen, and because
The rustle of your dress when you walked
Was a music that made all men sick with desire
I, who have heard only the blind poet's praises,
Am one with these old lovers
Quite a while after.

LEO KENNEDY

Critique.

One thing amused me very much at St. Rennell Rodd's lecture in Moyle Hall a few weeks ago. After a somewhat fierce attack on free verse Sir Rennell spent about ten minutes in praise of the wondrous poetry to be found in the Psalms and the Book of Job. Evidently the learned gentleman did not happen to notice that both these works are written in a free verse of a very high order.

K. N. CAMERON

Fable.

An Angel, an Ape, and a Fairy, being the victims of shipwreck once found themselves upon a desert island with a somewhat meagre supply of provisions. At first all went well and the three lived together in a little hut which the Ape had built. But by and by the Angel and the Ape fell out and the Angel said to the Ape,

"Seeing that I am so much finer and nobler a fellow than you, who are but an animal, and as our food supply is daily growing less, it seems to me that the only gentlemanly thing for you to do is to go and drown yourself."

But the Ape said nothing.
After a while the Angel said, "Well at any rate you needn't eat so much. Perhaps we can come to a compromise."
Still the Ape answered nothing, but regarded him quizzically.

Then the Angel said again, "Oh well, if you don't want to you don't have to. We shall have to do the best we can."

Then the Ape picked up a club and beat out his brains.
The Fairy, who had been watching all this quietly from a corner, now said, "I don't see that you had to do that. But perhaps it is all for the best. People were always mistaking him for me!"

The Ape, upon hearing his voice, desisted from further jumping upon the carcass of his friend, and advanced upon the Fairy brandishing his club. However, when he attempted to strike the Fairy, he found that he was made of so light a substance that the club merely passed through him and left him none the worse. Upon which he fell into a great rage.

For some time thereafter the Fairy lived in the tree tops and fed upon sunbeams and breezes, which he found very palatable indeed. The Ape, however, was a restless fellow and soon began adding to the hut Night and day the sound of his hammer could be heard throughout the island. The Fairy found the uproar quite objectionable, but, as he could not very well remedy things, remained silent.

In time the Ape had built himself a great mansion towering up to the skies and in which he lived surly and alone. After a while, however, finding that his life was rather barren, he invited the Fairy to come and live with him. But the Fairy was afraid and clung to his tree top. Every night the Ape used to sit on the roof of his palace and cry for him to come down, but the Fairy never moved.

So the Ape tried again to drown his sadness in work and made his dwelling bigger and bigger. Then one night the building fell upon him and killed him, and there was nothing left but some sticks and stones lying in desolation on the shore. In time the waves carried even these away and there was no trace at all left of the Ape's beautiful mansion, but the Fairy in the tree tops lived on well and happy among his sunbeams.

press our opinion through the column on certain happenings last Saturday. We felt that the people who were late, men and women, should have made more strenuous efforts to be on time. We also deplored the poor sportsmanship of those people who, by leaving early refused to back their own team when it was fighting a losing battle. Again we refer to men and women and in neither case do we make any race distinction.

As we see it, however many people may hold an opinion it may still be narrow and bigoted. Narrowness and bigotry are often the prerogative of the majority. We are thankful to think that far fewer people hold these views which we feel are bigoted, than

Three Goals By Mollott

Medicine Wins Interfaculty Soccer Match 4-2

BROWN STARS

Meds. Are Tied With Science Now Theologs Are De-feated

The Meds Soccer team are now on even terms with the Science outfit as a result of their 4-2 win over the Theologs on the campus yesterday. The latter were, on the whole, a better balanced team than their opponents, but the presence on the saw-bones line-up of two senior men certainly gave them a great advantage. Violette and Mollott scored all their goals, the latter scoring three, having the honour of getting the first "hat trick" of the season.

The game was pretty fast, neither teams letting until the final whistle. The last part of the second half was played in darkness, the match having started at 4.30, as the Science and Commerce Interfaculty Rugby game did not finish before then. Mollott, for the Meds showed up best, dribbling his way through the Theologs for his three goals. Violette was strong at centre half, robbing the opposing forwards time and again, of the ball. He scored the first goal of the match when Sinclair sent the ball over from the wing, taking a free kick. Sinclair, at outside right was "all there" on the offensive, but was given a great deal of trouble by Harano, at left half. The outstanding man on the Theologs was Brown, the centre forward. His dribbling was pretty to watch, and he was unselfish with the ball. He fulfilled the duties of the pivot man in a way that left little to be desired. With Murray and Wolff, the inside men, he combined to bring the ball down in Med territory, but Sparks and Quinten always seemed to get in their way. Fitzgerald was another stumbling block in the path of the aggressive Med sweaters Theologs, coming out of the goals on several occasions to save from the Theology forwards.

The Theologs played best towards the end of the match, when they were four goals down. Refusing to be blunked by their opponents and to score at least one goal before the end of the game, the game lived up considerably, and their efforts were rewarded when Murray, at inside left sent one past Fitzgerald. Encouraged by the one goal they forced the play again with the result that Wolff, at inside right, added another to the credit of the Theologs. Shortly after this, as the teams were playing in darkness, the final whistle went, with the ball in Meds' territory. Immediately after the final whistle the Meds rendered their yell of ligaments, bones, etc. declaring their indifference to the rendering of limbs, or words, to that effect.

The following were the line up:—

Theology	Medicine
Gillard	Fitzgerald
Right Back	Quinten
Taylor	Left Back
Dunlop	Sparks

Harano	Randazzo

Coates	Violette

L. C. Shelly then announced that "The Watched Pot" a three act comedy by H. H. Munro, had been selected for production in November. Mr. Chesney, casting director for the Club then gave a few details concerning the play and read some of the important passages in it, in order that the members present might determine what character they would be best suited for.

In all, the play contains thirteen characters eight male and five female. However only four of these are at all difficult. Casting for the various parts will commence on Monday afternoon from four to five. Any who were not present at the meeting last night and would like to try out for a part are requested to appear Monday at the office of the Players' Club in the basement of Strathcona Hall.

matter, and to take care of all arrangements for the Cabaret. They are to look into the question financially and see that the Scarlet Key Society will not be supporting a losing proposition.

The Chairman called for nominations and Stuart Wood, W. R. McMaster, M. Hyde and H. Boyce were appointed to this special Committee.

R.V.C. Sports Day

The Sports Day is taking place today at 2 o'clock at the Molson Stadium. The events include 50 and 100 yard dashes, hurdles, Running Broad Jump, Running High Jump, Javelin Throw, Baseball Throw and Graduates' Race.

Tea will be served after the Sports in the R.V.C. for the officials and competitors. The admission at the Stadium will be twenty-five cents.

Seniors Ready For Cadet Team

St. Germain and Millen May Play in M.A.A.A. Game

Senior Rugby Squad

There will be a signal practice this afternoon for the following men:— Ken Tremain, Hero Young, Silent Urquhart, Lovering, Doherty, Kritzwiler, Smyth, Brown, Teskey, Munro, Swabey, C. Church, Charlie Littlefield, H. Church, McTeer, Granger, Chard, Halpenny, Russel, Maughan Moar, Matheson, Talpis, Sperber Root Simpson, Consiglio, Jaquays, Klein, McLennan.

The senior rugby squad is losing no time. Despite the fact that the next intercollegiate fixture is over a week away, the first team players are evidently making believe that the Queen's game is this Saturday, judging from the ferocious scrimmage against the scrub squad at the stadium yesterday afternoon.

Today a signal practice for a selected squad is scheduled and the men will rest up until the exhibition with the Royal Military College at the stadium next Saturday. Significant in the list of names is the appearance of that of Willie Consiglio, track captain. Consiglio has been out for practice with the seniors and his work at outside wing has been of a high order.

There is a possibility that the McGill team will be bolstered by the addition of Ralph St. Germain and Bord Millen for the exhibition against M.A.A.A. on Thanksgiving Day. The rules prevent the two veterans from turning out on the regular squad. The fact that St. Germain and Millen will play in the annual exhibition should add much interest and colour to the city championship struggle.

Soccer--Gossip

With Medicine's win over Theology honours in the Interfaculty series are divided so far. Science defeated Arts-Commerce about two weeks ago, and Theology also going down to the Meds. Aside from the scheduled matches to be played, there are two postponed games to come off yet, and there being no open dates before November 12th, these will most likely be played after that date.

The Seniors have an exhibition match on Saturday on the campus at 2.15 P.M. Their opponents are an All Star team picked from the Junior Soccer League of the city. Coach Hay Finlay has again switched the line in starting Crabtree at centre forward, with Watt and Gavin at insides, and McKinnon and Mollott sending them in from the wings. Brown hurt his knee in the R.M.C. game in Kingston last Saturday, and Fitzgerald will do the goal tending for the team for the coming match.

TRACK MEN, ATTENTION.

All men, except regular members of the track team, and those working out with the harriers, must return any equipment borrowed from the track club before the end of this week. The track room will be open from 4 to 5.30 in the afternoon.

Marguerite, up whose precipitous sides a number of cadets clamber each year, can be seen an extensive view of wooded country. The vicinity of the golf links and nearby woods is highly suitable for the carrying out of tactical schemes.

The cadets will stay at the Ste Marguerites' Golf and Country Club famous for its sumptuous accommodation. Thus there will be an opportunity of a game of golf for those who may wish it. The meals for which the club is justly noted, will be in the manner customary to Regimental Messes. Besides this the cellar of the Club will be at the disposal of the Corps as in former years.

A letter was reported by the Secretary, W. R. McMaster, from Eric Adams, Sec'y, Union House Committee, proposing that the Society look after all Pep Rallies, nothing was done in regard to this matter.

The next general meeting of the Scarlet Key Society will be Monday, November 5th, from 5.00 to 6.00.

Commerce At League Head

Win Over Science Gains Lead in Group I

EXCELLENT GAME

Consiglio Kicks Neat Drop to Give Advantage to Com-mercials

Commerce went to the head of Group I of the Interfaculty league yesterday when they conquered Science, in the best game of the series so far, by the score of 3 to 1. Science had the lead for the first half of the game but were unable to hold their single point lead and failed by not being in good condition as their Commercial friends.

Science were by far the more husky team, as becomes engineers, and they soon made their impression upon the more theoretical students. They worked their way down the grid with consistency and soon after the beginning Crain sent over a long punt which Consiglio was under to hold, thus tallying the point for Science.

Commerce became active and used heavy plungers to get through the plumbers drain pipes. Brodhead plunged frequently, but he can not be called heavy, being about 130 pounds yet he made as frequent gains as any man for his side. Fitz-Randolph made the spectacular play of the afternoon and went through centre for about fifty yards.

It looked as though Commerce were going to get a touch but they tried an outside kick and as it failed they did not even get a centre field. Commerce continued long punts but Chisholm was responsible for running two probable rouged out of the dangerous territory.

Following one of these punts, Chisholm fumbled and with the ball on the ground and three Commerce men near at hand he kicked whereupon the ball was snatched up by the Commerce wings. Bringing the ball back to the centre of the field Consiglio kicked a neat drop, which owing to the nearness of the position of the goal, was rather difficult. Science came back with the fighting spirit but were unable to gain the coveted points.

Among the ancients comets were thought to be exhalations and not members of the solar system. This led to the belief that the appearance of a comet predicted war or some great disturbance on the earth.

Mr. Motherwell regrets to note that, although a comet appeared in 1914, the newspapers failed to predict a world war on the strength of this heavenly apparition.

Six Famous Rides

First we have the thrilling ride of Ben Hur, who lashed his nags on to win the Great Roman Derby against all comers.

Secondly, there is the famous ride of Lady Godiva, the first bare-back rider, who would have been lost to history had she lived in these bobbed-hair days.

Thirdly, we have the ride of Paul Revere, who apparently is largely responsible for the modern vogue of midnight rides.

Next, history records the ride of those three gallants, Dirk, Joris, and I, who showed a great burst of speed in the Steeplechase Classic from Ghent to Aix.

Then you've heard of the wild ride of John Gilpin, "a citizen of credit and renown," but a great galloper....and how!

men people looked upon him with awe as a god. True, there was a parliament consisting of the Imperial Council and the Duma, but the Tsar elected half the members of the Council and the Duma which was elected by the people, although not by general franchise he could adjourn at his pleasure.

Today the government is formed through an elaborate system of indirect election. The franchise is given to all above eighteen years, regardless of sex. It is restricted theoretically however to those who work, so there are certain exclusions such as the employers, those living from unearned income, and so on.

Congresses exist within each of the seven republics. The voting for these congresses is carried out in an electoral meeting, conducted by an appointed committee and organized for each factory, group of villages or trade union branch. Voting with few exceptions takes place with a show of hands.

It is very difficult to become a member of the Communist Party. Workers and peasants are on probation for six months, others for two years, and sever discipline is maintained in the party. A candidate is elected on the merits of his services and if these are unsatisfactory he is rejected whether he is a Communist or not.

The Soviet Government is an intricate political system in which the common man is encouraged to take part. If, for instance, less than fifty percent of the electorate turns out at an election a second one is held. The driving force of the Communist Party is kept in power partly through a recognition of its merits by the majority of the people.

In 1914 at the outbreak of the Great War Russia was a backward nation industrially. Conditions grew worse year by year as production fell away and the food situation became critical. In addition transportation facilities. The crisis was reached in 1921 with the great crop failure of that year. Since then there has been steady progress until last year when production was equal to that of 1915. It is expected that this year production will be ten percent ahead of last year. This measures up to the post-war record of other European countries.

Today trade unions are well developed. The system is organized according to the principle of one industry, one union. "For example in the universities the professors and scrub-women would belong to the same union." The union tries first to protect the economic interest of the workers whom it immediately represents, next to improve the cultural level of the workers, and lastly to improve the production and technique in the entire Soviet Union.

"Don't let us denounce all that Bolshevism has done, with a sweeping statement; try to understand it

Correspondence

yesterday's correspondence would lead one to believe.

That the Students' Council is acting quite within its rights in asking for the withdrawal of a member of the staff of the "Daily" for which it solely is responsible is obvious. The "Daily" is widely distributed; it goes to countless universities as the official organ of the Students' Society of McGill. It is also sent out to thousands of graduates. We cannot help feeling that graduates will wonder what has happened to the spirit which gave McGill the name we are proud to own. The Council was perhaps summary and hasty in its action but the urgency of the case demanded an immediate stand.

Moreover, we were not aware that the Students' Council ever claimed to express the opinion of the Women Students. The Students' Council merely did its best to show the public as quickly as possible that the sentiments of this editorial are quite outside the spirit of the policy of the Student Body.

However, there is good in all things, and it is to be hoped that this misunderstanding will clear up many matters and lead to a closer co-operation of the whole student body so that matters concerning both men and women such as the Daily, the question of the Annual, the Red and White Revue and other joint efforts can all come fairly before the representatives of the whole student body.

First, try to appreciate it," concluded Margithon.

Dr. Stephen Leacock, as the Honorary President of the club extended a few words of welcome to the newcomers to the Political Economic Club, and said that he looked for their support in the coming season.

While he felt that the system attempted by Russia looked very well on paper, he would not agree that it was a success, when foreigners did not dare to enter the country.

Dean Ira McKay, when asked to say a few words to the club, said that he disagreed to a large extent with the opinions expressed by Dr. Leacock, and stated that our system in Canada was dependent on certain principles proposed by communists. "Canada is a land of great opportunity for students taking Economics," he said.

A short discussion followed the papers.

Dr. Marvin, who is economist for the Royal Bank of Canada, was a guest last night.

The Editor,
McGill Daily.

Dear Sir:
One of your editors has been asked to resign for expressing an opinion in the editorial column of your paper. You as editor-in-chief are responsible for the sentiments expressed in the Editorials. The fact that the Council refused to accept your resignation, while calling for that of the women editor, shows that it is less concerned with the sentiments expressed than with getting the women off the Daily.

The Students' Council, in asking for the resignation of a member of the M.W.S.S., have overstepped their authority. The M.W.S.S. is a separate organization altogether, and should refuse to accept decisions from the Students' Council, unless they have proper representation on that Council.

The opinion expressed in the editorial is, I may say, not a private opinion by any means, but the prevailing opinion among all women who tried to watch last Saturday's game from the Women's section of the Rooters. Instead of apologizing to such unmanly people, it would be better to run an etiquette section in the Daily for their benefit.

Yours etc
NORA HOME,
